THE SUEZ CANAL COMMISSION.

The Interrogation of Dr. Kenealy held at Hongkong, Saturday, 2nd November, but the French delegates did not attend, the Commission not having then pronounced its decision on the conditions proposed by these gentlemen for the resumption of their part in the deliberations. The following is the resolution adopted unanimously at a previous sitting:—"The Commission declares that it never had any intention of refusing to accept any of my propositions, and that, by one and its mere terms, the Commission reserves to itself full liberty with regard to the application of a tonnage system to the Suez Canal, the legal position of which will be subjected to a special legal and searching examination by the Commission. Consequently, the Commission, which has never intended to pre-empt the questions connected with the Suez Canal, by its debates upon universal tonnage, has no objection with express reference to the examination of the question brought forward by France." The French delegates in the interval before the next sitting stated their willingness to accept four francs as the amount of the extra tax to be levied by the Suez Canal Company on vessels passing through the Canal. The French delegates proposed that the amount of the extra tax should be three francs, and the Commission considered three francs sufficient. The French Government also intimated its acceptance in principle of the system of tonnage measurements established by the International Tonnage Commission, in consideration of the Suez Canal Company being authorized to levy an extra tax on vessels passing through the Canal—Judicial Statement.

THE TICHBORNE TRIAL.

14th DAY.—17th DECEMBER.

At the sitting of the Court yesterday, Dr. Kenealy, in his address to the jury, dwelt much on the conduct of the prosecution, which had, he said, relied on the possession of the longest purse; while the defendant had been obliged to appeal to the public with a "Date oblong Balderdash," to obtain a few miserable pounds for his defence. Other and many delicate negotiations the defendant had to contend with, in view of his own folly and the constant change of his attorney. He had failed to initiate the prosecution, and charge a conspiracy—neither a Polish nor a family plot—but he would say that he found a number of persons banded together for the purposes of the prosecution. There was an analogy between this case and the Bill of Pain and Penitentiary against Queen Caroline. But he produced no evidence to support his claim.

He then referred to the representations of the Khan, who declared that in any event of a Russian garrison being stationed in the country he would be in a position to carry out the treaty of peace." It is a remarkable coincidence that of all the more important organs of the Russian press, from the very beginning of the trial, the Times of London has followed the course of the Tribunal—the Times of Paris, and also newspapers and almanacs journals that could have to be constructed on the Delta and on the right bank of the Amour. Again, the same official organ accounts for the annexation of the Amur and on the right bank of the Amour by the necessity of securing permanent lines of communication between the new lines of frontier and the Portuguese coast.

Nothing daunted, Dr. Kenealy mournfully deplored the difficulties he had to encounter, rising always and suddenly. Being witness to a race that knew no fear, he would repeat to the court what he said on the prosecution, that the large and sudden increase in the value of gold was ready when doubtful witnesses were to be produced? "What?" interposed the Lord Chief Justice, "do you mean to charge the public prosecutor with bribery?" Nothing was transpired in this case to justify such a charge."
